Covenor Message APS & ISPP 2027 Gold Coast

On behalf of the Australian Pain Society (APS) and the International Association for the Study of Pain (IASP) Pain in Childhood Special Interest Group, it is our great pleasure to welcome you to the Gold Coast, Australia, for the joint APS and 16th International Symposium on Paediatric Pain (ISPP) Conference 2027.

We will gather on the lands of the Yugambah people, the traditional custodians of the Gold Coast region.

This unique joint conference brings together the APS Annual Scientific Meeting and ISPP in 2027, creating an exceptional opportunity to connect national and international leaders in pain research, clinical care, and lived experience across the lifespan. By combining these two vibrant communities, the meeting will foster new collaborations, strengthen existing partnerships, and accelerate progress in improving pain outcomes for people of all ages.

A central theme of the 2027 meeting is innovation in pain—from translational science and emerging technologies, to the future of pain care and implementation in real-world settings. The Scientific Program Committee is curating an exciting and forward-looking program that will highlight innovative approaches shaping the future of pain research and management across both our pediatric-focused and lifespan pain communities.

Whether you are a clinician, researcher, trainee, person with lived experience, educator or policy maker, this meeting will offer meaningful opportunities to learn, connect, and be inspired, with a strong focus on translating innovation into impact.

The Gold Coast offers an exceptional setting for this joint conference. The region combines world-class conference facilities with a thriving health and research ecosystem, supported by strong partnerships across universities, hospitals, communities, and research institutes. The Gold Coast Convention and Exhibition Centre provides a state-of-the-art venue in the heart of Broadbeach, just moments from accommodation, dining, and the iconic Australian coastline.

Beyond the conference, the Gold Coast is a spectacular destination. From its renowned beaches to the lush hinterland and unique wildlife experiences, there are countless opportunities to explore and unwind. Whether you're enjoying the ocean, discovering local culture, or connecting with colleagues over exceptional food and hospitality, the Gold Coast offers something for everyone.

Whether this is your first APS or ISPP meeting, or you are a long-standing member of either community, we warmly invite you to join us. This joint conference promises to be a truly special event—bringing together a passionate, collaborative, and global community dedicated to improving the lives of people affected by pain.
